had made up his mind that he has been be permitted to carry the $50,000 first money to the Atlantic coast. Pettengill was formerly a cheap agent for cheap poolrooms, and gained his reputa-tion as a starter at the Gloucester racetrack, which is to reputable racecourses as the lowest slums of vilest part of Chicago are to the cleanest and most respectable residence quarters of New-York. They did not note inly that St. Leonards ran his race long before the binndering or evil-minded and plotting Pettengill (you can take your choice) dropped the flag. Taral rode St. Leonards at Chicago, and he was so anxious to win the race for Mr. Keenwas over zealous at the post. He broke away repettedly when Pettengill had no intention of dropping the flag, and used up the speed and staying power of St. Leonards in these false starts. Garrison was smart enough at Chicago-far smarter than he was at sheepshead Bay yesterday. He was riding a colt in the Derby that was a comparative outsider in the betting, and he was riding to defeat the favorite, si. Leonards. So he saved Boundless with all the cunning which he can compass—and that is a great deal-and when that singular starter, Pettengill, finally gave the signal, after all the weary waiting, Roundless was by far the freshest colt in the race. That explains wonderful rush of Boundless in the homestretch which he left the exhausted and overtasked St. Leonards a half dozen lengths in the rear. Boundless had run a mile and a half so readily and

of My on Thursday afternoon in his work in a little ess than 2:40 that most of the trainers at Sheeps end Bay conceived an ardent admiration for him dersover, he is a rakish-looking colt, with lines that suggest slipperiness and speed, resembling, in their suggestiveness of swift, smooth glidings, of a cutting of records and a marvellons rapidity, the lines of the Mrate schooners of the old days. Boundless looks the a pirate of the turf, or at best like a Vesavius br a Now Then of the track. Yet when he cam out yesterday he appeared too wire-drawn, too fine, too light for a race of a mile and five furlongs. He lean Cassius, leaner than a greyhound fully prepared for the coursing for the Waterloo Cup, leaner an a Saracen at the slege of Grenada when the supplies had been scanty for months and provender was down to a famine basis. But many of the train-ies (some trainers in this country are intelli-ent, but most of them have no more gray matter in their skulls than a puff-ball has juice) told their employers and their speculative riends that Boundless was sure to win the Realization. riends that Boundless was sure to win the Realization.
At the opening of the betting St. Leonards was a trong favorite. At the close Western money, the money of Eastern visitors to Chicago, Michael Dwyer's plunging wagers, the support of the FOURTH RACE-For two-year-olds. Purse $1,000. Selfspeculators who take the advice of trainers, and he timidity of the bookmakers, who could hardly lieve that the winner of the American Derby could cose the Realization, made Boundless the favorite over St. Leonards, James R. Keene had unlimited confi-ience in St. Leonards, and backed him liberally, to had his son Foxhall, who followed his father's nple. So had William Lobelard, the trainer of It Leonards, who was by far the best looking colt of them all when the six candidates for the Realization came upon the track. He is big, handsome, symmetrical, a true son of St. Daise, and with a strong resemblance to Potomac, also a son of St. Blaise, who won the Realization for Michael F. Dwyer After his triumph in the American Derby Garrison with to have gone on the stage. He has inflation, ever for pulling back St. Leonards, who carried less weight than Boundless and Sir Waller, far back behind them. It was only the craze for theatrical dissipations on turf. play, which set his brain on fire, that hed him into this grotesime folly. He wished to make every backer of St. Leonards shiver and tremble. He desired to Scare them all into a panic, and, when they had given up all hope of the race, as St. Leonards was so far in up all hope of the race, as St. Leonards was so far in the rear of the rest, he intended to startle every one by a rush that would astonish them all, and then he uld gain the laurels. But this was a $30,000 stake, and all such theatrical tricks were out of place.

The result of Garrison's deplorable error of judg-ment was that when he moved up with St. Leonards st he was forced to go on the extreme outside of the field, and lost much space. In the homestretch the field, and lost much space. In the homestretch the contest was entirely between St. Leonards and lengths before Promenade. the Sunbeam colt. Up to the final hundred yards Garrison was evidently gloating over the prospect of Garrison was evidently glosting over the prospect of what seemed to him a certain triumph. But the Sunbeam colt carried only 107 pounds to the 117 1-2 on St. Leonards, and Sims currode Garrison at the finish. Hence the sunbeam colt won the Realization Stakes by a head.

James R. Keene was justly indigmant at the outgraceous manner in which Garrison had sacrificed first place in the Realization to his frenzy for gallery finishes and glittering effects. So were all the many backers of St. Leonards, who was the popular navorite. It is extremely unfortunate for the prosperity of the jockey clubs that in all the most president and popular of the great races of the year, except the two-losses. Lamplighter lost the Brooklyn Hardenp and Suburbark for both of which he was the closed hars of the populare. An outsider won the Methopollian an outsider won the Realization. The average all mirror of racing becomes discouraged and disheartened at such a series of dissisters as tines, and loses his interest in the turf. The attendance at the races for the nonths will be grievously affected by this monural sequence of misfortunes.

Boundless was a colt of moderate class and loses has interest in the turf. The attendance at the head of the homestreich. Mr. Cushing may well be grateful to have been beautiful to ride a finish with Sines.

STARES—THE OTHER RESULTS.

Chicago, July 1.—Ten thousand persons crowded into Washington Park today, attracted by the Queen Isabelia Estakes, and as many pairs of hards applanded John McCafferty and his great filly, Relea Nichols, when he wan Stakes, and as many pairs of hands applianded John Scholars, and as many pairs of hands applianded John Stakes, and as many pairs of hands applianded John Stakes, and as many pairs of handsome style, without the application of the spur to the heautiful daughter of Irsquois. It was a popular victory. Maid Marian, the fast Kendall Stable filly, was outclassed. To a pretty start, the Maid took a slight lead, but McCafferty drew Helen out and then began a duel. At the quarter Helen Nichols and Maid Marian were six lengths ahead of the field and going strong, Issie O heading the second division. At the half the leaders increased their lead to eight lengths. Helen Nichols won in fine style; Dare Vela second, and Maid Marian third.

The great races at the different tracks this year have done more to discourage racegoers than all the cheap selling races ever run. They are worse to bet on than the hurdle races, with no chance of the lockey on the favorite getting killed," was the remark made by a man that bet heavily on St. Leonards.

Hornpipe won the Double Event Stakes for two-year-olds easily. Hornpipe has one club-foot, as trainers call it, but it does not interfere with his racing.

It is divided into three paris. The Commissioners of Statutory Revision prepared Paris 1 and 2, and Mr. Spalding prepared Part 3. Part 1 contains the constitutional and statutory provisions relating to highways and Part 2 contains a clear, concise and practical statement of the law, and is specially prepared for the use of laymen. Part 3 is devoted to practical suggestions on highway construction and maintenance and contains much useful information in relation to the proper care of roads. Considerable space is also given in this part of the work to a discussion of the proper construction of roads. The work is intended to be practical and suggestive in its nature, and is especially prepared for the use of nighway officers.
